Employment Opportunities for Economists

The International Monetary Fund (IMF) is seeking economists at both the entry and experienced levels for positions at its headquarters in Washington, D.C. Entry-level applicants must have a graduate degree in economics, finance, or a related field. While applicants with a Masters degree will be considered, those who either hold, or will soon be receiving, their Ph.D. are preferred because of the competitiveness of the program. Experienced economist applicants should hold a graduate degree in economics, public finance or a related field, and have a minimum of five years of relevant policy experience typically acquired at a central bank; an economics-related government department; a research, statistical or financial sector institution; or a university. Knowledge of public expenditure, international capital markets, debt management, exchange rate management, and banking supervision is an advantage.

Positions primarily involve economic analysis, monitoring economic developments, and providing advice to the IMF's member countries. All positions require strong analytical skills, as well as excellent written and oral communication in English.

IMF representatives will be in Tokyo and Kansai the first week of December to interview candidates. To learn more about these positions and to apply on-line, please see our website: <http://www.imf.org/external/np/adm/rec/vacancy.htm>. Applications must be received by November 9, 2008. Only those candidates selected for an interview will be contacted.
