Following a positive housing demand shock and a negative financial shock, output and consumption react more strongly in economies with higher LTV ratios than in economies with lower LTV ratios.

Source: IMF staff calculations.