Deleveraging is ongoing in many advanced economies, mainly in the household sector. However, saving rates are not expected to rise much over the coming two years, suggesting a gradual rise in consumption as employment picks up. Conditions remain vulnerable in peripheral countries of the euro area.

Sources: Haver Analytics; and IMF staff estimates.