Through the Global Financial Crisis, foreign banks supported banks in Central and Eastern Europe, but the financial crisis turned that around. This chart shows the amount of support provided by foreign banks to banks in the region, measured in billions of euros. The x-axis represents the years from 2007 to 2009, while the y-axis represents the amount of support in billions of euros. The chart shows a steady decline in support from foreign banks to banks in the region, with the amount of support falling from around 100 billion euros in 2007 to around 30 billion euros in 2009.

In 2007, foreign banks provided around 100 billion euros in support to banks in the region. However, by 2009, this support had declined to around 30 billion euros. This decline is indicative of the impact of the financial crisis on the region, as foreign banks cut back on their support due to increased risk and uncertainty in the region.
