Figure 2.13. Middle East and North Africa (MENA): Growing out of Its Downturn

Higher commodity prices and external demand are boosting production and exports in many economies in the region. Government spending programs are playing a key role in fostering the recovery, especially in oil-exporting countries with stronger public debt positions. Nevertheless, real credit is expected to be sluggish as credit demand remains weak in many economies and credit supply is held back by declining property markets and vulnerable financial sectors in some economies.
