After reaching 100 percent of GDP, the debt-to-GDP ratio tends to decline, even though at a very moderate pace. This tendency to reverse is not present at lower levels of debt, for example when debt rises above 60 percent of GDP.

Source: IMF staff calculations.
Note: The horizontal axis shows the number of years after the debt-to-GDP ratio crosses the threshold.