Spillovers from U.S. growth disappointments tend to be larger and more persistent than those from other large economies, such as China, the euro area, and Japan.

Source: IMF staff calculations.

Note: X-axis units are quarters; $t = 0$ denotes the quarter of the growth surprise. Dashed lines indicate the 90 percent confidence interval around the point estimate.